

University of Tennessee College of Law: The Premium Public Law School

The University of Tennessee College of Law is one of the premium public law schools in the country. Situated at Knoxville, this law school is the most suited for all those students who want to secure employment in the state itself as it is both inexpensive and has a top grade faculty.

The University of Tennessee College of Law is one of the premier law schools located within the main campus of the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. This particular law school is all the more appropriate for the resident students of Tennessee, as the University of Tennessee College of Law proposes the applicants the exclusive prospect of learning law as part of a small student body which is proud to have one of the pre-eminent faculty to student ratios in the entire country. Furthermore, the students at the University of Tennessee College of Law get the advantage of prospective employment openings in the state of Tennessee itself and some of the neighboring areas.

One of the added advantages for the resident students is that they can pay the particular in-state tuition and hence enjoy the chance of gathering lower law school debts when they graduate. And that is why this law school is a perfect place for the local students and other applicants who want to practice law in this state itself or somewhere in the neighborhood.

Before the training for the first year law school starts, the students need to take a number of courses and training paraphernalia. First, a series of mini courses taught over a period of 1 week which gives an introduction to Law as field of study is marked as the transition period for students entering law school. Once the first year at law school is over, students get the chance to choose from 70 variant courses in Law. They need to choose an elective combination for a total of 89 credit hours necessary for graduation. The students are further given the chance to make a custom plan for their study of law as per their interests, thanks to the impressive faculty available. Students can also opt for interdisciplinary pursuits taking the benefit of dual programs like JD/MBA or JD/MPA.

Though the university receives a limited number of applications each year for admissions, this particular law school employs strict rules in the selection and admission process. For more details, please visit the official website of University of Tennessee College of Law.

The university has a library for law students and staff members. Also, there is a complete collection of audio-visual equipment that can be used in classrooms like LCD projectors, laptop computers, video cameras, and more. Further there is a Center for Computer-Assisted Legal Instruction where students can access more than 600 legal online lessons.

Sports and other Recreation Activities are also given importance and various competitions and activities are organized frequently. There is an exclusive sports club at the university. Students also get the chance to enjoy outdoor activities like hiking, fishing, rock climbing, etc.

The University of Tennessee College of Law is one of the best places where aspiring law students from the state of Tennessee and the neighborhood can study. This law school gives them the chance of not only studying in the best environment but also brightening their employment prospects.
